THIS EVENING'S MUSICAL SELECTIONS

Combined Elementary Band

Kingsridge

Quincy Hilliard

This stately march begins with a trumpet and woodwind fanfare which is echoed by the low brass. The sequence of echoes continues in various instruments until the final statement by the full ensemble.

Aztec Sunrise

John Edmondson

The sound of distant drums is soon joined by flutes, oboes, and clarinets to depict the beginning of sunrise. Soon the music becomes full and powerful, representing the full sun showing above the horizon.

Beauty & the Beast

Michael Sweeney

This popular and challenging work for young musicians features the trumpet and clarinet sections exchanging different parts of the main theme from the classic Disney movie.

Combined Middle School Intermediate Band

March of the Martian Chickens

Jared Spears

The title appropriately describes this zany march which is full of clashing melodies and frenetic flute trills. A brief brass and percussion interlude is followed by a woodwind reply which leads to the closing passage.

A Fantasy on Chester

William Billings

We present this wonderful melody in a march style. The arrangement features a contrasting slow and lyrical section in the middle. The closing material features the trumpet and saxophone sections playing in a fanfare style that brings the piece to an exciting close.

Combined Middle School Advanced Band

Black Forest Overture

Michael Sweeney

Listen for the clarinets and low brass to combine to create an ominous opening statement in this exciting work. Aggressive percussion and trumpet scoring also add a special energy to this unique concert overture.

In the Mood

Joe Garland

This Big-Band hit was made famous by Glenn Miller and his orchestra in the early forties. We hope that you enjoy this timeless swing-style classic.

Combined High School Symphonic Band

Declaration Overture

Claude T. Smith

This exciting overture features almost every section in the band. With its syncopated rhythms and memorable melodies, Declaration Overture has become a standard in American band literature.

Into the Storm

Robert Smith

Packed with sheer excitement, this very rhythmic overture was inspired by the 1993 "Storm of the Century." With interesting percussion effects and clashing chords, this work creates an awesome sense of power and energy!

Combined High School Wind Ensemble

Fantasy on American Sailing Songs

Clare Grundman

This folk medley features "Hornet and Peacock," "Lowlands," "What Shall We Do With a Drunken Sailor," and "Rio Grande." Each melody is developed with interesting harmonic treatment.

The Light Eternal

James Swearingen

Based on the hymn, "God of Our Fathers," this reflective work musically recounts a magnificent story. Commissioned by the Orrville High School Concert Band of Ohio, this dramatic piece premiered on May 19, 1991.

Combined Elementary, Middle, & High School Band

America, the Beautiful

H.E. Akers

Our closing presentation this year begins with brassy fanfares from the high school ensembles. The middle school bands join in as the melody begins, and the elementary band enters on the chorus. Staggered entrances by each band help to create a sense of power as the piece progresses; finally ending with dramatic woodwind trills, magnificent chord changes, and a final entrance by the combined low brass and woodwind sections.

MUSICAL OBJECTIVES

Every individual has his or her own concept of what music is. For someone who has never played an instrument or sung in a choir, music may simply be thought of as "something to listen to." For someone who has never learned to read music, it may only be a "series of confusing marks on paper." Music means something different to every person; and so it is an essential element in our world that helps to define who we are. Young students who accept the challenge of learning to perform on an instrument will begin to appreciate such values as perseverance, patience, caring, teamwork, and individual responsibility. Through exposure to music, these students will begin to investigate who they really are and what they are truly capable of. Music will mean something very special to each one of these students, and will undoubtedly shape many aspects of their lives. We, as listeners, will benefit from our young students' dedication as we hear them perform and are moved by what we hear. Remember, though, that it is the musicians who have secured the power to move us through music.
